

Crucial in all courses, assessment (discerning how much and how well students are learning the knowledge and skills you aim to teach) merits particular considerations in diverse classrooms. The principles offered below are good for all courses but particularly helpful when you have students from a range of different backgrounds and skill levels.

Note: The

